2006 LIVE WEBCAST SERIES

Disclosure of Disability

February 21, 2006

Peggy Anderson, Alabama Department of Rehabilitation Services

As rehabilitation professionals approach business on behalf of job seekers, or as consumers with disabilities apply for employment, the issue of disclosure must be considered. This webcast will provide information on the topic from two different perspectives. The first will be what can and cannot be discussed related to the ADA. The second will be from a "best technique" perspective, specifically, how to disclose a disability to employers.

Partnering with One-Stops to Facilitate Customized Employment Outcomes

March 28, 2006

Maggie Leedy & Lisa Cuozzo
Montgomery Works

Part I will provide an overview of One-Stop Career Centers and the services that are provided to all job seekers. This includes the Workforce Investment Act and Universal Access and how to best use this resource. Part II will focus on the features of customized employment and how to integrate them into One-Stop Career Center services.

Providing Employment Supports for Individuals with Psychiatric Disabilities

April 11, 2006

Deborah R. Becker, Community & Family Medicine & Psychiatry, Dartmouth Medical School, and the New Hampshire Dartmouth Psychiatric Research Center

The President's New Freedom Commission on Mental Health endorses evidence-based supported employment as a way to assist people with serious mental illness to lead productive work lives. This presentation will focus on individualized job supports and ways to develop the employer relationship.

Funding the Transition to Meaningful Adult Roles

May 9, 2006

Joe Henn

This presentation covers financial planning including budgeting and funding strategies that allows a person with a severe disability to live a full, integrated life in the community. In so doing, the person can continue to be eligible for benefits, while working full time and living independently.

Organizational Transformation to Expand Integrated Employment: Lessons Learned

May 23, 2006

John Butterworth, University of Massachusetts at Boston

Shifting resources from facility-based and non-work services to integrated employment is a complex process that requires changes in values, strategies, policy, and personnel. This webcast will highlight lessons learned from the 15 organizations participating in the T-TAP project about implementing an organizational transformation.

Achieving Customized Employment Outcomes Using Diversified Funding

June 13, 2006

Nancy Brooks Lane, Cobb/Douglas Community Services Boards

Maximizing resources requires "thinking outside the box" for the customers with whom we work. This includes blending funding, utilizing generic services, and tapping into other community options. This webcast will discuss specific situations in which existing provider funding has been used creatively.

Job Restructuring

August 15, 2006

Jim Meehan, KFI

Restructuring jobs to match the employee's interests and abilities as well as employer's need remains a valuable part of every job developer's "toolbox". Often overlooked is the importance of providers restructuring their own employees' jobs to make a specific job placement. During this presentation, Mr. Meehan will talk about his organization's experiences and will also discuss a basic but powerful approach to job negotiations.
