Into Adulthood: Transition to Work for Individuals with Autism

This is a new non-credit hour, online course on autism and transition to work. Teachers who complete the course will earn 45 points toward teacher licensure re-certification under the professional development category.

Important Note:

The Virginia Department of Education has reviewed the course syllabus. Any teacher, who wants to use it as a professional development activity for re-certification, needs prior approval of the school district. The school district will be responsible for designating the actual number of points that a teacher can earn for participating in the course. We have suggested that participation will require 45 contact hours. Please note that the course/training does not meet any of the requirements for initial licensure in special education or any category of licensure endorsement.

Economically priced!

The registration fee for the course is $275.00 plus a $23.07 to purchase the textbook, Autism & the Transition to Adulthood: Success Beyond the Classroom by Wehman, Datlow-Smith and Schall. The book is available through www.amazon.com.

Course competencies:

- Understand the continuum of autism spectrum disorders.
- Identify issues and conditions for effective transition from school to work, training, or post secondary education.
- Build effective partnerships between academic and other community based service providers.
- Describe best practices for effective job development, on the job support, and job retention strategies.
